No. 4 "Mazies Won't Tell"

OCT 26 '25

Mazie St. Clair, George Dorsey's sapient stenographer, again comes to his rescue when George takes over the "legal business" of the Star School of Motion Picture Technique, run by Homer Glibb and Louis Picard, two crooks who have been making "screen tests" with no film in their cameras.

When a friend of Mazie's, Flora Hibbard is made the dupe of the crooks, Mazie, not knowing that George is their attorney, writes them a threatening letter over George's signature. Thinking that George has double-crossed them, they go for him, and the result is that Mazie is fired again. Undaunted, she decides to show the crooks up and with her two pals, Albert Tripp and Bennie Fall goes to the "sehell" and takes a "lesson". While riding a dummy horse, she feigns a fall; the boys investigate and prove they are right when they see the empty cans and hollow camera and pretending to go for a doctor they really go for George Dorsey.

In the meantime the "instructors" realizing they have been found out, bind Mazie and in their attempt to make a getaway set fire to the building, Mazie is rescued by George and the two boys and George, through Mazie's intervention, is given a real case by a large film company.
